arm to table events have become very popular, and farm activities featuring farm products in central Kentucky is no exception. In Clark County, Gilkison and Reece Farms put on the event Harvest to Hand in early August. The event showcased food grown by Gilkison Farm, Reece Farm and other local farmers. The great tasting food was prepared by TJ Harville, and all proceeds of the event went towards agricultural education in Clark County. Willie Wilson, Lexington Loan Officer, attended the event and while there joined other members of the Kentucky Agricultural Leadership Development Program (KALP). Willie is a member of Class XI of KALP.

Ag Credit Loan Officers Attend Mid-South Ag Lending School

wo loan officers from Ag Credit have finished a summer session at the Mid-South School of Advanced Agricultural Lenders. The school took place at the University of Tennessee at Martin, and this year marks the 15th year for the session.

Chris Cooper Ag Credit's Senior Loan Officer in Richmond, and Justin Craig, Ag Credit's Senior Loan Officer in Lebanon attended the advanced education conference during August 1-5. Last year's Mid-South graduates from the Ag Credit lending team were Joe Goggin, Principal Loan Officer in Danville and John Peek, Senior Loan Officer in Stanford.

The Mid-South Agricultural Conference is planned by regional lenders and producers for professional individuals who have two or more years of experience in the lending and agricultural production industries.

Featured speakers at the August Conference included Dr. Richard Brock, Owner and President of Brock Associates; Dr. David M. Kohl, Virginia Tech University; Bob Young, American Farm Bureau Federation; and Dr. Matthew Roberts, The Ohio State University.

Participation in the Mid-South School of Advanced Agricultural Lenders is one of many on-going training experiences that enhance knowledge of Ag Credit loan officers. Ag Credit currently serves thousands of central Kentucky farmers and rural residents with farm and home loans in the Association's 17-county service area.

Education: The Game Changer

egardless of age, pursuits of lifelong learning and continual improvement include the path of education. Learning a new strategy or an additional skill can revitalize one's business and life. I believe special recognition is due to all the Farm Credit Associations that continue to sponsor young and beginning farmer programs to provide a foundation for the business journey. I enjoy participating in Farm Credit's various educational efforts along with the many, dedicated Farm Credit team members who mentor and present information. Indeed, such programs are shaping the future of agriculture.

Many associations offer longstanding programs that provide leadership training over multiple days. Those events expose aspiring young agricultural producers and entrepreneurs to cutting-edge information and trends. Programs are designed to challenge their knowledge and stimulate their thinking on business practices. In addition, programs are instrumental for networking and developing long-term relationships. Those connections offer individuals a separate, outside group of peers with which they can share opportunities and challenges. Of course, with social media and today's rapid style of communication, the flow of ideas is ever increasing.

As an example of an educational program's potential, I remember one couple that owned and operated a traditional beef operation. After an educational course on value-added marketing, the wife was energized and wanted to market their beef locally to restaurants and other high-end venues. This couple has been very successful through the years.

Other Farm Credit Associations offer "nuts and bolts" programs that examine in detail the construction of budgets, cash flows and balance sheets. These programs explain how to run different scenarios of financials and market conditions for any new venture. From testimonials of these programs, some producers have scaled back expectations due to the scenario testing, while others abandoned an idea altogether. It can be disappointing to discover an idea may not be profitable or sustainable, but it preserves considerable time and money for perhaps, another future opportunity.

The educational focus for some Farm Credit Associations is generational business transition. These programs bring together both younger and older generations to discuss and develop future transition plans. While a single day program does not solve the challenges of business transition, it does identify issues and start crucial conversations. Most importantly, these programs provide a format for successful future planning.

The Ag Biz Planner offered by Farm Credit University can be customized for businesses in the start-up mode, those with a family member returning, or the agricultural entrepreneur exploring niche markets. Over 750 producers have enrolled in the training, which includes a mix of online and face-to-face sessions. Farm Credit team members often serve as mentors for the program.

At a recent session in Pennsylvania, one participant stated the course confirmed his thoughts on expanding into niche markets. At graduation from the course, another indicated that this program highlighted for him the need to ask some critical questions about the future direction of the business and laid groundwork for successful transition planning.

Other educational efforts include trips to Washington D.C., state capitals and international markets. As the public becomes increasingly less aware of agriculture, it is important to stay connected with public interest, changing consumer demands and trends. Each of these can prove to be educational game changers. Cooperatives continue to make the initial investment into education, but in many ways, they are generating huge dividends for the future.

Testimonials from past educational venues include phrases such as, "This returned us from recreational lifestyle farmers to ones that cash flow," and "It opened our eyes to the resources and programs available." Others claimed it helped re-shape their goals in the planning process for better business, family and personal balance.

The side-by-side approach of education with producers, Farm Credit team members, and strategic alliances is critical. In tackling challenges and opportunities of tomorrow's agriculture, education truly is a game changer. After all, agriculture is the foundation behind the success of society.

Marion County Food to Fork

Marion County FFA students: Nick Sandusky Gerard Flanagan, Karrie Followell and Kate Mattingly educated students on hog production and where their food is produced.

Warren Beeler, Executive Director of the Governor's Office of Agricultural Policy and Steve Downs, President of the Marion County Cattlemen's Association are shown above enjoying a moment together. The Marion County Cattlemen's Association grilled burgers and hotdogs for the event.

Six Ag Topics; Ag Credit was a Sponsor Woodford County Farm Tour Features

g Credit was among sponsors of the Woodford County Farm Tour that took place during late July. The one-day event drew a large crowd of ag producers, with two farms featured on the tour.

First Stop on the Tour

Thistle's End Farm ( also known as Old Home Place Farm) featured agricultural involvement of several families, including John Wilhoit and Sue Churchill; Bryan Richardson; Anna Bynum and Aaron Stancombe. Flower production, pastured meat production and vegetable production were featured on the Thistle's End Farm.

Flower production at Thistle's End Farm spans the full gamut, from seedling production in a high tunnel-type greenhouse. Mature flowers are packed in special shipping containers, stored in refrigerated conditions and taken to market fresh and ready for someone's pleasure.

Chickens and pigs at Thistle's End Farm are moved about the farm, using mobile electric fencing. Hair sheep are also produced at the farm, using Katahdin and St. Croix breeds. All stock is grass fed, with feed supplements provided by Bagdad Feed Mill in Shelby County.

Vegetable production was the third feature shown at Thistle's End Farm. About an acre of vegetables are being organically produced on the farm, using trickle irrigation and no plastic. Six vegetables comprise primary production on the vegetable portion of the farm, including watermelon, butternut squash, sweet potatoes, okra, sweet corn and potatoes.

A Traditional Tour Ending

The 1,200-acre Sycamore Farm ended the day's activity on the Woodford County Farm Tour.
Featured were tobacco production,
nitrogen management in soybeans,
and a tour of the Kentucky
Department of Agriculture (KDA)
Mobile Activity Center.

With the cost of labor currently posing a challenge to Burley producers, a spraying technique that can stop the manual process of topping tobacco was discussed. The process is being explored for the purpose of reducing the labor-intensive process of topping tobacco.

Since nitrogen is a major factor in production of soybeans, the application of additional nitrogen late in the season was discussed. The process is in early trial stages in other areas, but few trials have been performed in Kentucky. Ongoing experimentation with the process was discussed at the Woodford County Farm Tour.

The KDA Mobile Science Center contains ten interactive work stations, which enable students to conduct activities and investigations related to agriculture and the environment. Tour attendees were able to tour the specially designed KDA mobile bus, while discussing benefits that young people obtain from the mobile education unit.

Serving Franklin and Anderson Counties

g Credit has opened a new office in Frankfort. The Association's Board of Directors and management have worked throughout the past several months to determine the location, need and staffing for the Franklin County office.

According to Jim Caldwell, President of Central Kentucky Ag Credit, the Board of Directors determined that Franklin and Anderson County farmers and rural residents need a more convenient location to obtain farm loans and rural home loans. Prior to opening the new Frankfort Ag Credit location, the nearest Ag Credit Offices have been in Danville and Lexington. Opening of the new Frankfort location takes financial services several miles closer and more convenient to residents of those two, important central Kentucky counties.

The new Ag Credit Frankfort Office is located in the Farm Bureau Building on the south side of Frankfort. Information is as follows:

> Central Kentucky Ag Credit Frankfort Office 1120 U.S. Highway 127 South Frankfort, KY 40601 Phones: 502-875-0863 (or) 888-980-9417

Jim Caldwell said opening of the Frankfort Office is a continued improvement in service that Ag Credit has extended to farmers and rural residents in recent years. "The continuing goal of the Association is to provide affordable, convenient and reliable financial services to farmers and rural families. Since area farmers and rural families need access to financial services that cater to their unique production and lifestyle needs, the Ag Credit Board and management is responding to satisfy that need."

Central Kentucky Ag Credit provides financial services in 17 counties in the Bluegrass Region. The Frankfort Office is the seventh (7th) full-service Ag Credit location. Other offices are located in Richmond, Lexington, Paris, Danville, Stanford and Lebanon.

Jeff Zinner will be the Loan Officer for the Frankfort Office. Zinner currently lives in Franklin County with his wife and two children, while helping manage his family's sheep farm. Prior to his employment with Ag Credit, Jeff was the Assistant Manager of the North American International Livestock Exposition for nine years. Jeff's role at the North American has consisted of substantial duties for all types of livestock on a national level. Jeff is a member of the Kentucky Farm Bureau, Kentucky Cattlemen's Association. He is a USDA Certified Livestock Grader, Franklin County FFA livestock leader and a USA Swim Official. Lindsay Barnes, will also be working at the Frankfort office as Loan Assistant.

Why Do Business with a Co-op: Cooperatives Offer Advantages

by Robert Anderson

entral Kentucky Ag Credit is a cooperative, or simply a co-op.
Ag Credit specializes in lending to farmers, part-time farmers, rural residents and farm-related businesses in central Kentucky.

The term cooperative refers to the business structure that Ag Credit operates under. In the U.S. there are four principal types of business structures

- Proprietorships
- · Partnerships
- Corporations
- · Cooperatives

Ag Credit provides people needed financial services and manages the co-op in the best interest of all of its customers. The customers of Ag Credit are called members because as part of doing business with Ag Credit, people become members thru the purchase of a share of ownership of Ag Credit.

FACT	BENEFIT
The ownership and control of a co-op rests with the members, i.e., the people who use the services of the co-op.	The way Ag Credit handles business will always be suited to the interests of all its farmers and rural residents.
Ag Credit returns a portion of its profit back to people who use its services.	Ag Credit really does "Put our profits in your pockets." That means money back to you to spend however you wish.
Because of cooperative business structure co-ops can "pass thru the profits" directly to its members. Operating this way allows Ag Credit to improve its' financial results.	Ag Credit passes this financial benefit along to members in the form of competitive interest rates and through patronage refunds.

You'll like the way we do business

In the U.S., one in three Americans is a member of a co-op, which is the business model for over 40,000 businesses representing over $3 trillion in assets in industries from credit unions to rural electric co-ops, purchasing, groceries, farming and worker-owned businesses across many sectors. Source: NCBU/CLUSA

Local energy supply cooperatives here in Kentucky are just one of the many co-ops operating in Kentucky and throughout the world. Credit Unions are another example of local cooperatives and there are many others spanning the retail, agricultural supply, and food supply chain.

Organic Association of Kentucky

March 3-4, 2017

he Organic Association of Kentucky (OAK) will hold an annual meeting during March 3-4, 2017. The membership event will take place in Shepherdsville, at the Paroquet Springs Conference Center, which is located at the Shepherdsville exit just off I-65, about 25 miles south of Louisville.

The Association was formed from a group that met at Kentucky State University in 2009, and who moved an idea forward to completion in 2010. The first meeting of OAK was held in 2010, and the Association Board of Directors was also formed at that time.

A goal of OAK is to drive change to a more sustainable food system ... in consideration for the health of people and the environment.

More information regarding registration and the March convention agenda can be obtained on the internet at www. oak-ky.org.

Ingredients:

- 1 ½ cups (3 sticks) unsalted butter, softened
- ½ cup confectioner's sugar
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 cups all -purpose flour

Instructions:

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Beat butter, both sugars, and salt in a large bowl. Stir in flour. Lightly knead until blended. Roll out to desired thickness and use cutter to make cookies. Bake for 12-28 minutes depending on the thickness and size of the cookies, until lightly browned around the edges. Allow to cool.

Melt the chocolate of your choice with a teaspoon of vegetable oil. Dip half of the cookie and then add sprinkles if desired. Let them dry and serve them on a tray or bag individually for gifts.

Makes 20-24.

Enjoy!

ontgomery County prevailed over Boyle County by a knife's edge in the fourth annual Farm to School Junior Chef championship cook off Friday at the Kentucky State Fair.

"Congratulations to Montgomery County for an outstanding job throughout the competition," Agriculture Commissioner Ryan Quarles said. "This year's tournament was perhaps the most competitive we've ever had, and that reflects the growing enthusiasm for this program throughout the Commonwealth. We appreciate all the coaches who took some of their valuable time to work with their student teams, and we're especially grateful to our partners at Sullivan University for increasing their commitment to this program."

The Montgomery County team of Hayden Holley, Joy Pidgorodetska, MacKenzie Green, and Gabby Hovatter prepared Farmer's Choice Dirty Rice to win over a panel of three judges from Sullivan University. The Boyle County team - Sidney Darnell, Samantha Stewart, Mady Thomas, and Chandler Lane - prepared Barbeque Pork Tacos with Apple Poppy Seed Coleslaw to reach the final match.

Each Montgomery County member won the opportunity for an $8,000 scholarship from Sullivan University plus cook books and a $150 cash prize from John Wiley & Sons. John Wiley will provide its text books free of charge to any Montgomery County member who enrolls at Sullivan. Montgomery County will demonstrate its dish at the first Farm to School Southeast Region meeting in September in Greenville, S.C.

Each Boyle County member won the opportunity for a $5,000 scholarship from Sullivan. Members of Pikeville Independent and Henderson County, the other semi-finalists, each won the opportunity for a $3,000 scholarship from Sullivan, plus cook books.

Hayden Holley was named Top Chef of the tournament and won an additional $2,000 scholarship offer from Sullivan and a cash award from John Wiley. Junior Chef encourages high school students to learn how to cook by using local ingredients to prepare healthy meals while teaching students about agriculture, marketing, organization, teamwork, and community involvement.

The Junior Chef season begins with district competition in the spring and continues with regional matches to determine the teams that will advance to the state tournament. Junior Chef teams are made up of three to five students in grades 9-12.

The Junior Chef competition is part of the Kentucky Proud Farm to School Program, which helps Kentucky schools purchase local foods to serve to their students. Children get fresh, nutritious foods to help them grow up healthy and strong. Local farmers get another market for their farm products.

The Farm to School Program and the Junior Chef competition are administered by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture. For more information, contact Tina Garland, the KDA's Farm to School Program Administrator, at (502) 382-7505 or tina. garland@ky.gov, or visit www.kyagr. com/junior-chef

Who Am I?

I work 15 hours a day, 7 days a week, 52 hours a year, unless I have to put in overtime.

Neither rain nor snow nor gloom of night keeps me from my appointed rounds, but I am not a mail carrier.

I console the sick, bind wounds, give shots, set bones and deliver babies, but I am not a doctor

My business partner is God. I pray many times a day, read the bible and have been known to preach on occasion, but I am not a minister.

By my example I give children the tools needed to develop a lifestyle and work ethic that will ensure they grow into responsible adults, but I am not a teacher.

I can fix a $200,000 piece of equipment without an instruction manual, but I am not a mechanic.

I provide food that feeds hundreds of people in my community and around the world, but I am not a grocer.

I dig holes, drive nails, install plumbing, run electrical lines, fix leaky roofs, putty, plaster and paint, but I am not a builder or contractor.

I experiment, do research, keep records, am an expert in the use of chemicals, but I am not a scientist.

Periodically I will develop a device that will help me do my job more efficiently, and I will share this knowledge with those around me so that they might benefit, but I am not an inventor.

The weather is my life, I study it, I analyze it and predict it with as much accuracy as any weatherman, but I am not a meteorologist.

I am often the subject of controversial newspaper and television reports, but I am not a public figure.

Who am I?
I am not any of these.
I am an American Farmer.

"On Your Front Porch" Programs Continue for Non-Profit Organizations

Johnathon as he performs with his banjo in early August during an "On Your Front Porch" appearance.
He was in the Old Mud Meeting House in Harrodsburg, as the guest of the Harrodsburg Rotary Club and the Mercer
County Historical Society.

Ag Credit produces "On Your Front Porch" as a free service to non-profit organizations throughout the Association's 17-county service area.

While the August Rotary Club appearance was a special evening session, most appearances take place during regular meetings of civic clubs and other non-profit organizations who wish to enhance their sessions with good music, an overview of music history, and a personal appearance by Michael Johnathon. He is host and founder of WoodSongs.

Ag Credit provides the free service to non-profit organizations as an extension of the association's community involvement. The association has traditionally supported and sponsored farm and rural activities such as farm field days, UK Extension events, cattle events, and more. In recent years Ag Credit has extended community service into the larger rural environment with an understanding that farm and city relationships are vital to a healthy central Kentucky economy.

Organizations who want to invite "On Your Front Porch" programs to their meetings should contact Ag Credit organizers at: 606-782-3847 (or) 502-931-2000. Any Ag Credit office in central Kentucky can also provide information and coordination for appearances of "On Your Front Porch".

Harrodsburg Kiwanis Club Hosts "On Your Front Porch" Event

he Harrodsburg Kiwanis Club hosted an "On Your Front Porch" event in October. The music was the entertainment for the Harrodsburg Kiwanis Installation Banquet, held at Cloud's Restaurant. Central Kentucky Ag Credit sponsored the event and Michael Johnathon of WoodSongs performed. As a special treat, Mikaya Taylor, of Lawrenceburg, also sang at the meeting.
